

MINER KILLED, SEVEN INJURED; MARCH BROKEN

Strike of Bituminous Workers
Enters Its Fifth
Week

MOB HURLS STONES

Procession in Direct Violation of Court Injunction

PITTSBURGH, June 22.—(INS)—Bloodshed again today marked the strike of more than 10,000 Western Pennsylvania bituminous coal miners as the strike entered its fifth week.

One miner was killed and seven other persons were wounded when State Police and deputy sheriff broke up a march of the National Miners' Union followers at the Wildwood mine of the Butler Consolidated Coal Company, near here.

The miners marched in direct violation of a court injunction issued by Judge H. H. Rowand, forbidding them from staging such demonstrations in the vicinity of the Wildwood mine.

The dead man, identified through his miner's check, was Pete Ziglar, of Wildwood. The seven other persons wounded were removed to the Pittsburgh Hospital.

Over the week-end the strike situation had been ominously quiet but at daybreak a mob of 200 men and women advanced to the Wildwood Mine hurling stones at miners who refused to respond to the National Miners' Union strike call.

They will have associated with them in the canvass a group of men of the community who have volunteered their assistance.

"Receive your solicitor with a smile and contribute to the maintenance of these community assets," is the attitude that many have already taken who know the value of the Emergency Hospital and the Visiting Nurse service.

BOY DIES OF BURNS RECEIVED AT PICNIC

Trenton Minister Saves Girl's
Life in Outing Explosion

"GAS" TORCH EXPLODED

An 8-year-old boy died of burns and five men and two other children were injured when a plumber's blow torch exploded during a picnic Saturday at the State Park in Washington Crossing, Pa.

The dead boy, Ralph Latham, Jr., of 29 Southard street, Trenton, N. J., was burned over his entire body.

Two others, his father, Ralph Latham, Sr., 33, and Mary Ferguson, 12, of 32 South Lafayette avenue, Morrisville, are in Mercer Hospital. Their condition is said to be not serious.

The Latham boy, brought to Mercer Hospital in a critical condition, lived for about five hours.

Alertness of the Rev. Henry Miller, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, Trenton, probably has saved the Ferguson girl's life. The minister had gone to the park to swim and was standing on the river bank when the explosion occurred.

One of the first to realize the seriousness of the mishap, he procured a blanket from his automobile and hastily wrapped it about the girl's body, putting out the flames.

At the same time, the Rev. Mr. Miller prevented the child's grandmother, Mrs. George Ferguson, Sr., of South Lafayette avenue, Morrisville, from being burned. The woman had gone to the aid of her grandchild and was bending over her as the flames leaped upward.

Other victims, treated by nearby physicians for burns of the arms and hands, include:

The Rev. Leonard V. C. Mytton, pastor of the Morrisville Presbyterian Church, whose congregation was conducting the outing.

Kenneth Beadle, eight years old, of 238 Stockham avenue, Morrisville.

George Ferguson, father of the injured girl.

Frank Hibbs, Sr., of Robertson avenue, Morrisville.

William Johnson, of 96 Fairview avenue, Morrisville.

Ferguson, who suffered burns about both elbows, said last night that he had just lighted the torch, upon which a coffee pot was to be placed, when he noticed a crack along the side of the gasoline container.

"I started to kick sand around the torch when I heard a sudden puff and a glaring sheet of fire spouted upward," he said.

FORMAL NEGOTIATIONS DIRECTED BY HOOVER

President Fortified by Two Nights of Rest at Rapidan Camp

ON THE DEBT PAYMENTS

CAMP RAPIDAN, Va., June 22.—(INS)—Fortified by a two-night rest in the coolness of the Blue Ridge Mountains, President Hoover left his Rapidan fishing camp for Washington early today, prepared to assume personal direction of the formal negotiations with Europe's capitals over his proposal for a one-year holiday from inter-governmental debt payments.

The proposal would delay collections of approximately $250,000,000, due in the next fiscal year of German reparations, Allied war debts and other governmental obligations growing out of the World War. The President immediately before his departure from the capital had proposed the postponement to afford "an economic breathing spell," for the world and to save Germany from possible financial and political chaos.

The week-end had afforded the State Department opportunity to lay the exact terms of his "depression moratorium" before the Allied and Central powers, and he expected, soon after he returned to his desk, to begin receiving official advices from abroad as to its reception.

The President departed from Camp Rapidan immediately after six o'clock breakfast well satisfied he had scored a ten strike with his bids for a free year for world economic recovery.

The foreign press dispatches he perused over Sunday have convinced him his idea will be acclaimed abroad while further long distance calls to absent legislators of both parties have reassured him of Congressional support next December in ratifying the year's respite to be allowed the Allies in meeting their war debts to the United States.

Mr. Hoover has returned also with a champion who stands ready to maneuver his confirmation through the Senate—Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and member of the American Debt Funding Commission who engineered original ratification of the Allied debt funding agreements through the upper body of Congress.

Smoot arrived belatedly at camp yesterday from his home state to have his first personal talk with the President about the proposed dip into the international financial situation, and soon thereafter issued a formal statement, declaring it "should go a long way toward lessening the burdens of depression and restoring prosperity at home and abroad," and pledging he would "do everything within my power to advance it."

Further conferences will be held at the White House today with available members of Congress. Mr. Hoover let it be known at the time he made his plan public he would have held it up until a greater cross-section of the leaders had been consulted had not this hand been forced by premature publicity.

THREE HURT IN RACES REPORTED IMPROVED

Frank Farmer, Hurt at Langhorne Speedway, Leaves
Hospital

OTHERS ARE BETTER

Frank Farmer, 30, of Philadelphia, one of the three drivers who were hurt Saturday when their cars cracked up during the races at Langhorne, is recovering from his injuries at his home. It was first reported that Farmer suffered a crushed chest, but X-ray pictures revealed that he received but two broken ribs. His car ran into the rear of another machine operated by Herman Schurch, of Hollywood, Cal., just in front of the grandstand, crashed through the guard rail and turned turtle before landing in the ditch. Schurch's car was thrown clear by the impact, but it spun around three times before coming to a halt. He did not continue in the race.

Gordon Condon, 26, of Altoona, Pa., the most seriously injured, was hurt in the first 25-mile race. Shortly after Malcolm Fox, of Westville, N. J., crashed through the fence on the east turn of the track and miraculously escaped serious injury. Condon lost control of his car and went through the hole made by Fox. His car turned over in a cloud of dust. Physicians rushed to his aid and found him lying near the badly damaged machine in a semi-conscious condition. He was rushed to Mercer Hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from a fractured skull and shoulder and lacerations of the scalp. He was reported improving, last night.

Near the close of the last race of 50 miles, while John Moretti, 27, of Pleasantville, Pa., was traveling at a fast clip to win fourth place, his car tipped slightly on the west turn and threw him out. He flew through the air for about 40 feet and landed on his back in the middle of the track. He also was taken to the same institution in a waiting ambulance and it was found that his injuries consisted of a fractured shoulder and shock. Physicians say his condition is good.

Congrats, Mama!

In this case it's a proud daughter congratulating her mother at a graduation exercise—instead of the commonplace other way 'round. The two-year-old congratulating her mother is just as proud as any girl her age could be that Mama, Mrs. Warren B. Meixner, an honor student, has won her Bachelor of Science degree at Temple University, Philadelphia.

POST OFFICE HERE SOON FIRST CLASS; EFFECTIVE JULY 1ST

Will In No Way Affect The Service Now Being Rendered

EXPECT CONFIRMATION
Official Word Has Not As Yet

Arrived from Washington

Announcement was made in Washington today to the effect that the Bristol Post Office had been advanced from a second class to a first class office. The announcement was practically confirmed by Clarence G. Young, postmaster here.

Mr. Young said that all of the necessary details had not as yet been completed and that the official papers had not come through, but that he felt assured that the statement issued at Washington must be correct.

The advancement from second class into the first class for the local office will in no way change the service. It merely means that the post office here now does a sufficient amount of business to be classed as an office of the first rank.

The Bristol office was a first class office during the war, Mr. Young said he believed. But after the war business dropped and the office consequently was set back into the second rank.

Queried as to what had made the advancement Mr. Young attributes it to the increased use of the mails here by local industries. It was intimated that a number of the industries here are going after business by mail solicitation. Then there has been a number of new industries located here within the past few years and these are using the mail service quite extensively.

BARBARIC

Groans, prayer, curses—and the swish of the cat-o'-nine-tails.

A man is tied to a post; an officer of the law swings the lash, cut after cut, against the writhing body.

The victim gasps and moans. Perhaps a merciful weakness robs him of consciousness before the full toll of strokes is counted. Whether he is thus fortunate or with extraordinary powers of endurance goes through the ordeal with full awareness of its agonies, it is a palpitating hulk of humanity that is dragged from the post after "Delaware justice" has been satisfied.

Is this just legalized savagery, brutalizing alike to the victim and to the public which tacitly approves it?

Or is it a justifiable, because efficient, deterrent of crime?

For the latter opinion there is weighty support. A United States Circuit Court of Appeals judge advocates more whipping posts to solve the crime problem. Clergymen have urged their use for the punishment of those who offend against the laws they uphold. Legislatures in a number of commonwealths have debated the question.

But there are millions of Americans who, though it be proved to them that the whipping post stops crime, will continue to abhor and oppose it as a terrible survival of medieval barbarism and a "cruel and inhuman punishment."

WALL STREET "BOTTOM"

What is wrong in Wall Street? Not only one group of stocks but all stocks keep tumbling, reaching "bottom" only to drop still further, and not even stopping at those old levels so long considered "rock bottom." Speculators, who told themselves that issues they were watching could go no lower bought only to see them do the impossible in heart-breaking fashion.

What is behind it? Reduced dividends are not the explanation, for issues that have maintained their dividends have been placed on the market skids with issues that have never paid a dividend. Another theory is that hammering by the bears is driving stock values down, but the experts say professional operators will not fool with the market at this stage.

Another untenable explanation is to the effect that long-term stockholders are losing confidence and are dumping their holdings. Were this true, buyers could not be found fast enough to absorb the windfall and the descent of the market would be more rapid.

The fact that there is a buyer for every seller would indicate that while one group thinks business is going to the dogs another anticipates a recovery from what it looks upon as a periodical readjustment. So artificial was the prosperity of 1929 that the pendulum must swing just as far in the other direction before it can reach a medium.

One of the disappointments of this life is the prize-winning essay or limerick last line.

Organization of the "Sons of the American Legion" is a definite arrival at middle age for the ex-doughboys.

Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan, seeks a position in the home of wealthy Mrs. Lorrimer, when the latter's son, Travers, shell-shocked war veteran, enters. At sight of Mary Lou he becomes wildly excited, takes her in his arms and calls her "Delight" and "wife." Later, Mrs. Lorrimer explains that Travers has mistaken Mary Lou for Delight Harford, whom he claims he married in England, but of whom no record can be found. Mrs. Lorrimer persuades Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight to help Travers regain his health. Travers is told that, as Delight was so young at the time of her marriage and had since thought him dead, they must start all over again. In her first encounter with Travers Mary Lou plays her part perfectly. Travers takes new interest in life. Mrs. Lorrimer hopes he will fall in love with Mary Lou.

CHAPTER XXI

MARY LOU drank her milk and lay back relaxed in her chair, her eyes on the small, bright fire, far back on the great stone hearth. She was healthily tired; she was happy. They'd had a glorious ride, she and Lorry; she was improving. She would make an expert horsewoman some day, he had said, for her hands were firm on the reins, she had a naturally good seat and she was quite fearless. He had praised her today more than ever, and she was coming to depend upon his praise. And it was doing him so much good.

"That's what I'm here for," she reminded herself. She had to remind herself. She was growing into her role, it had become part of her. She would have frowned in sudden astonishment if anyone had called her Mary Lou. She had been Mary Lou years ago, in another life. Now she was—Delight.

Second Nature

At first she had worked hard in her part; now it was second nature to her. Understanding instinctively where a great deal of the trouble lay, she had set about eradicating it as much as possible. She had made him talk about the war, about his days at the front, about his service. He had, she knew from his mother and from experience, been left with a curious horror of airplanes. Now and then one passed over the house and even lately, stronger though his nerves had become, it affected him unpleasantly, set him to shivering, to stammering a little. If she could get him to talk out his experiences, to drag out into the sunlight the things that ate at him and festered in the darkness, it would help. Later, if she could interest him in aviation, get him perhaps to take a flight, as a passenger, much of the shock reaction would depart, thought Mary Lou, wisely. But that would come in time.

She made him, too, tell her about his prison camp experiences and she then set him and herself a task, brushing up the little German each possessed in order to read, at first hand in the original, some of the wise and moving books that had come out of post-war Germany, books without bitterness or malice, emanations of the war from the other side. If he could, she thought, get some insight into these alien minds and think of them as, somehow, brothers in experience and reaction, rather than enemies, a great deal of damage might be undone.

Jenny and her gang were helping; everything combined to help. Larry Mitchell had come out to see her, after a careful coaching by mail in his part. Larry was to be, she told him, a friend met on shipboard, someone who had helped her over her first hard, lonely months in New York. And Larry, once the part was entrusted to him, played up, taking an unholy pleasure in calling her "Delight" about every other sentence. She had met him alone at the station the evening he came out to dine, and had managed to crowd a lot of her experiences into the short drive and to tell him many of her plans.

Risky Undertaking

"I've got to make a good job of it," she said, "and you must help me. If you won't, if you think you can't, I'll drive you right back to the station this minute. We can't risk mistakes."

She was driving the roadster. Mrs. Lorrimer, when she found that Mary Lou had for some years driven her uncle's little car, had given her the roadster for her own use, and she was handling it like a veteran.

"Don't shoot," Larry had begged, "I'll come down!" He had been consumed with house or hotel for Christmas dinner."

Lorrimer frowned, the observant doctor saw, but did not speak.

A little later the two of them made their way upstairs together and Lorrimer followed Mary Lou to her door, instead of parting from her on the gallery landing.

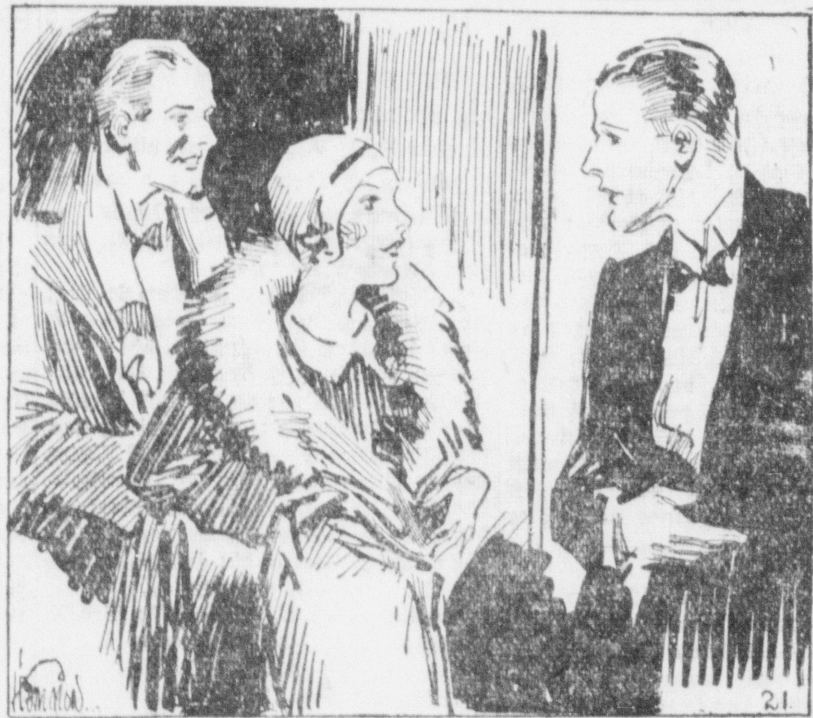

"Look here," she said abruptly, "I like Mitchell all right, but—"

"But what?" she asked, as he stopped her, her heart beating nervously.

"He's in love with you!" stated Lorrimer, bluntly.

"No," Mary Lou looked at him directly and spoke soberly, "no, he is not. Nor am I in love with him, Lorry. We're good friends; he's been fine to me. I'm grateful, and we're fond of each other. But that's all. Please don't think things!" she begged.

"I'll try to believe you," he muttered, "though how he could know you and not—" Suddenly he caught her hand and held it in a merciless grip. "I have been pa-curiosity and amazement. He had been afraid for Mary Lou; he had thought the whole scheme madness. But once at Westwood House his fear and disapproval had vanished. He had fallen in love with Mrs. Lorrimer, and had felt a certain swift pity for Lorrimer, knowing his story, once brought in contact with his personality. And as for Mary Lou, she'd carry the thing off. Only, knowing all the circumstances, he naturally asked himself what would happen when the inevitable reckoning came, and what would happen if Mary Lou were to fall in love? But knowing her, also, he did not dare mention the possibility to her.

Lorrimer received him courteously, if a trifle suspiciously, and, his mother noticed, watched the younger man all through the meal and the evening which followed. But he said nothing and seemed even to be attracted, for Larry succeeded, telling his wild exaggerated tales of life on a tabloid, in making Lorrimer forget himself more than once in laughter.

So this afternoon Mrs. Lorrimer reminded Mary Lou that Larry had not been out again.

"Why don't you ask him for Christmas?" she wanted to know. "Didn't you tell me he was quite alone?"

"That's awfully sweet of you," Mary Lou thanked her, glowing. "I know he'd love to come. Yes, he's alone; nothing but boarding-

On the Brink

It was the first time — in so long — that he had said anything of the sort. Their friendship had progressed along apparently normal lines; they were close friends, intimate comrades, and all these weeks he had not said . . .

"Please," urged Mary Lou, growing white, "please—"

"Is it still so distasteful to you? Well," he straightened up and released her hand, "you have my promise. I wouldn't have said anything unless the subject of this— other fellow had come up. Well, it did come up. I—just reminded you, Delight, that's all."

He left her looking at her crushed fingers and realizing how delicate the ground she walked on, how complicated and precarious her situation.

She went into her room and ran the bath water and started getting out of her clothes.

NO HOLIDAYS FOR US!

Merchants can shut up their stores on Wednesday afternoons, but the public transportation system does not suspend operations.

Workers in the factories may quit at Saturday noon, but the trolley cars and buses keep running just the same.

Mother and Dad may take the family on a vacation, but there is no vacation for the buses and cars.

Sunday may be "a day of rest" for most of the people, but for those engaged in the public transportation business.

And why? BECAUSE TRANSPORTATION IS NECESSARY.

Transportation simply cannot be eliminated.

There must be means of carrying people from wherever they are to wherever they wish to go.

They must be carried safely, expeditiously, conveniently.

That's what your bus and trolley service does.

You may wish that the buses were larger and newer; you may wish that the trolley cars were bigger and better, but when you make the wish or think the thought, please keep in mind the fact that we wish it just as earnestly as you do. Bigger and better buses and trolleys depend on only one thing—bigger volume of traffic served.

But whether the volume is big or little, the buses and trolleys are at your service, from early morning until early the next morning. The public has no more faithful servant than its transportation companies.

Boy Dies of Burns

Received at Picnic

His daughter was standing about ten feet away when she was struck by a shower of the flaming fuel. Her clothing caught fire and she ran about, screaming in terror.

The Rev. Mr. Miller ran first to his automobile and procured a blanket. Then he quickly wrapped it about the girl. The flames were extinguished and the minister speeded to Trenton with her.

Young Latham was caught unaware in a swirling sheet of flames.

Dave's Delicatessen

William Mays, of Stockham avenue, Morrisville, rushed to his aid, wrapping his coat about the boy.

The other persons, less seriously burned, were able to escape the full force of the flames.

The picnic had been planned by the church people and an afternoon of entertainment had been enjoyed. Supper was being prepared when the blast occurred.

County Seat Opens
Hospital Drive

Baby days in the hospital numbered 807. There were eighty-four minor operations and two major operations performed. The year brought forth a record of eighty births, 229 accident cases and 133 x-ray examinations.

No aid is received from the county or state for either the Emergency Hospital or the Visiting Nurse service, so that donations alone make these community assets possible.

The budget for 1931-32 calls for $8000 for maintenance, upkeep and necessary improvements.

The financial statement that will be read at the supper meeting next Monday shows the total cost of maintaining the hospital for 1930-31 to be $14,593.18. The receipts from fees to hospital amounted to $9,000.00. The cost of maintaining the visiting nurse service was $3,445.02, while the receipts from fees to the visiting nurse service amounted to $1,736.27.

Speaking of the free work at the Emergency Hospital during the past year, it was pointed out that the hospital treated 19 patients free of charge and gave 121 days of free care. There were fifty-three accident cases from Doylestown, thirteen being given free care. The Visiting Nurse service treated fifty-three patients during the year, free of charge and made 204 free visits.

Over fifty-three communities in addition to Doylestown have benefitted directly by the hospital and the Visiting Nurse service in one year.
